Clarke Caton Hintz is proud to announce that we have been selected as the American Institute of Architects New Jersey Architectural Firm of the Year, 2000. The firm was recognized as having established itself as a leading multidisciplinary firm providing professional services in architecture, urban design, historic preservation, planning, and landscape architecture. Our award-winning firm has created a record of success in architecture by creating aesthetically distinctive designs that meet the program, budget and scheduling objectives of our clients. We believe that this personal connection with our clients, together with architecture and planning, are fundamentally interdependent and our work is enhanced by that process. This award recognizes the firm as a whole. Our unique design process and philosophy is implemented by our staff which has a depth of professional expertise which enable us to handle large scale projects and respond quickly to our clients requests. This honor was bestowed at the service awards luncheon on Design Day, December, 2000.
